

“Reading Corner” Feature in Nashville Post, Summer 2015

“Most successful businesspeople are voracious readers, continually seeking more information that can make them and their ventures more successful. We reached out to a handful of leaders to find out what they’ve been devouring of late.”

The Great Crash 1929

*“I just re-read The Great Crash 1929 by John Kenneth Galbraith. It’s an old book discussing an old subject but it is efficiently written, has great nuggets of wisdom, and is still incredibly relevant. For an investor or an entrepreneur, how belief and risk interplay or what it means to be a leader should never be tired topics. One of my favorite quotes: “All of the great leaders have had one characteristic in common: it was the willingness to confront unequivocally the major anxiety of their people in their time. This, and not much else, is the essence of leadership.”*
